Things to do around Brussels - Wikipedia Brussels, officially the Capital Region of Belgium, is a region and the capital of Belgium.
The region has seven provinces: the two most populous are Brussels proper and Flemish Brabant. The city of Brussels is the de facto capital of Belgium. The Brussels Capital Region is the third most populous region in Belgium.
Brussels-Capital Region's location at the heart of the country makes it one of Europe's most important commercial, industrial, economic, political and cultural centres. The Brussels region is made up of three cities (one other than Brussels), Brussels proper, the province of Hainaut and the province of Brabant. It is the largest metropolitan region in Belgium and the second largest in Europe, after London and its surrounding metropolitan area. The region is home to nearly three million people and the Brussels metropolitan area has a population of 2.8 million. The total population of the region is more than 3.9 million inhabitants.

In 2016, the Brussels Capital Region was the economic powerhouse of the country with an output level that was significantly higher than that of Flanders and Wallonia. The region has given its name to the European Union. In English, 'Brussels' refers to the city of Brussels; in French, 'Brussels' refers to the region, including the city of Brussels. The region is also the seat of the European Commission, European Parliament, the European Council, and the Court of Justice of the European Union. In addition to these seats of the European Union, the region hosts the headquarters of the European Central Bank, the European Court of Auditors, and the General Court of the European Union. Other institutions are the Royal Maternity and University hospitals of Brussels, the Flemish Institute for Technological Research (VITO), the Royal Belgian Institute of Natural Sciences, and the Royal Tropical Institute. The city also hosts a number of international organizations, including the World Bank, the International Olympic Committee, the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe, and the International Atomic Energy Agency. The region is also home to the Belgian, Dutch, and Luxembourg foreign ministries, the Organisation for European Economic Cooperation, and a number of international organisations. Region The Brussels-Capital Region or Brussels Region, with a population of 3,000,000 is the most populous region in Belgium. It is one of the few regions in the country that supports a significant tourist industry.
