While they have no insurance, they do have their own set of bills that they have to pay out of pocket. While many times, there is little that can be done to remedy issues of over-grown teeth, there are many treatments that can be done to remove tartar and clean up the damage already done. In many cases, the only option to treat teeth and gums is to completely remove the tooth in a surgical or dental extraction. Some of the cases of this are when tooth and gum infection have gone deep into the bone of the jaw, and there is no way to treat the infection. In many cases, the only option to treat teeth and gums is
