The reason I need to do this is because the HTML content of that page makes a call to send the user off to a third party site (not facebook or google for instance). After the webpage loads and before it prompts the user to allow/disallow access, it tries to make the call - which the browser (chrome) blocks. Therefore, the WebView can't be opened. Is there a way to have the WebView launch without blocking the browser? Here is a way to reproduce the issue. 1) Install "Jailbreak a goon app" from this site. 2) Go to settings, scroll to the bottom, tap Privacy, tap "Adblock" and untick "Allow all". 3) Reboot. 4) Open up the browser and try to open a page that requires you to go to a third party site. It will block you. 5) Now open up the app and try to visit the same url. You'll be prompted by the browser to allow access. 6) In my app, I am launching the webview like this: ba244e880a
