A: Here is the for your requirements Q: AWS Elastic MapReduce Master Node I'm doing a project with Amazon Elastic MapReduce on PHP and I need to add a Master Node. I read the docs and on there they mention you can add a Master Node by setting the "task-shed" property to zero, but what does that exactly mean? and how do I set it? A: If the task-shed property is set to zero, then the job scheduler will use the API (rather than the S3 Accelerate API) when it assigns a task to a machine. This can save you some latency if you're running on EC2 because you might have to wait for the S3 request to reach the data center, as opposed to the much faster EC2 API. I suggest reading over the AWS documentation regarding the task-shed property in the User Guide: You'll want to set this property to one when you do an API call that touches the task's resource data. For example, if you had a Hive table that needed to be queried, you could set the task-shed property to one. Here's an example using an S3 command to write data to an EMR managed S3 task's resource: The code example would look like this: `$client = new S3Client(array('version' => '2008-10-08', 'region' => 'us-east-1')); // Set the resource data access property to 'task' $command['data']['type'] = 's3'; $command['data']['resource'] = '/'; // Set the task-shed property to one $command['data']['task-shed`
